

Rushing Happens to Everyone

Almost every lineman has felt the pressure to hurry a job at some point - maybe it was getting close to quitting time, a storm restoration situation, or customers waiting for power.

When that pressure hits, it's easy to start skipping small steps or assuming things are safe. That's when mistakes happen.

Recognizing that feeling of being rushed is the first step to slowing down and staying safe